Excerpt from An Address to William Tudor, Esq.: Author of Letters on the Eastern States, Intended to Prove the Calumny and Slander of His Remarks on the Olive Branch If it be mischievous to keep alive hatred and prejudice, to exasperate the passions, and give false impressions to one part respecting another, of the community, the epithet belongs to your Olive Branch. It is not my intention to engage in any (discussion. Your work came in my way, and I gave my opinion of it. If it be a fair, manly exhibition of our two great political parties, without disguise or partiality, what I have said of it is then a misrepresentation; if it be otherwise, I have spoken of it justly. Sir, I have received yours of the 25th ult. which I have read with sincere regret. Until I perused it, I had fondly flattered myself into the opinion, that the false allegations respecting me and the Olive Branch, contained in your Letters on the Eastern States, might have arisen from inadvertence; and that you might have formed your opinions without due examination of the work, and perhaps from hearsay. Had this been the case, you would not be the first critic who displayed his skill by the condemnation of a work which he had not perused. Your letter has undeceived me.
