Own up, Will, you've got hold of some great news, and you're just keeping it back to tease us! How about that, Bluff? You're right, Frank, for I can see it in his face. His eyes are just dancing with a big secret. But wait up; here comes Jerry across the campus. Now he'll just have to open the box, and show us. The college boy, called Will by his comrades, and whose last name was Milton, laughed good-naturedly, and then nodded his head. Why, fellows, he said, I saw Jerry coming, and meant to wait for him. When all four members of the Rod, Gun and Camera Club, who call themselves the Outdoor Chums, are present, I've got something to say that is going to set you all just wild. At that the young chap who went by the name of Bluff made frantic gestures for a fourth lad, just then heading in their direction, to hurry along. Evidently this freshman must have suspected that something unusual was brewing, for he started on a run, and came up almost panting for breath. What's in the wind, fellows? he demanded, glancing from one eager face to the others. Don't tell me you've made up your minds where the club is going to put in the vacation just ahead of us, because that would be too good news. Who's going to take pity on me, and relieve my suspense? Why, Will here has got something to tell us, and wanted to wait till you joined the crowd, said Frank Langdon, who was just a little taller, and more manly-looking...
