Not illustrated. 1772 Excerpt: .his speech vicijfim The second Psalm may be a proof of my assertion. There we see the church, the impious man, the Messiah, and the Prophet, take the word one after the other. 6th, lastly, There is in the holy books an harmony, a connection of ideas, which, must never be lost out of fight, when we lay hold of them, or that we must look, for, and discover when it is obscured by Hebraisms. This is orje/of the most certain signs of the goodness of a tranflation, and sense that is given to the hard passages when it is connected without effort to that which precedes, and follows. Here are, Sir, in general, the/most interesting principles of tfeg Hebrew language. They are acknowledged as such by all grammarians, and I only follow their echo, by exposing them to you. Doubtless H you you will fay, you know them as well as I; it being an insult to think, you are under a necessity of being taught. And I answer you by a dilemma without reply; either you know them or not; if the latter, instead of giving you an insult by teaching them to you, I settle on myself a sure epithet on your gratitude. If the first, why do not you make use of it. Why is the explanation you give (Dissert. I. page 412) of the five first verses of Deut. chap, xxxiii. the most arbitrary that can be? I will examine your...
